Foreword

The writer has known Mrs..Brenda Bailey for a number of years and has had ample opportunity for observing and appraising her approach to genealogical problems in the Society's library, where the major part of her research has been undertaken.

As a librarian used to daily habitual contacts with students of family history, it is not difficult to detect individuals who have a natural flair for this type of investigation, as opposed to those who are satisfied to copy data from a printed book and accept it as factual. Mrs..Bailey's keen analytical mind places her in the first of these two categories, and those who may have occasion to consult her volume may do so. with complete confidence and with the knowledge that each statement incorporated is from an authentic primary source, double checked to ensure accuracy as outlined in her bibliography.

I have written this book in the hope that it will be of some help to others who are searching for ancestors. There are probably some mistakes in my book as I have yet to see a genealogy that did not contain some errors. However, I have checked my information more than the list of references indicates, and have tried to verify more than once, each statement made.

This book is not complete because if I waited to finish everything I would never have it published.

I hope the information here will at least give future genealogists a hint on where to look for what they want, and I will be most pleased if it will inspire my descendants to continue keeping track of the family lineages.

Herbert T. Bond was born in Detroit, Mich. but moved back to Mass. at an early age. He went to school in Groton, Mass. and Bristol, N.H. where he played on the base-ball team and is still remembered. The family moved to Stoughton, Mass. and he graduated from High School there. The family then moved to Hudson, Mass. and he went to work in his father's paper box factory, learning the business from the bottom up. He became known in the business and in 1897 he was asked to go to Augusta, Me. to build up a paper box business there that was in trouble. While there, he and his wife lived in the best suite at the Augusta House and were a very popular couple. In 1901 they returned to Hudson, Mass. so that their first child would be born there. Herbert's father had opened a box factory in Roxbury, Mass. and he went to work there and trained his brother Howard in the business. Herbert was an excellent salesman and landed a big account, for which he took full credit. That led to unpleasantness with his father, who sold out to Herbert and moved to Somerville, Mass. leaving Herbert and Howard at the factory in Roxbury. Early in 1902 Herbert moved to Somerville, Mass. and in the spring of 1905 moved his family to Winchester, Mass. where he spent the rest of his life. In 1909 he gave up his box business and went with the Carr Fastener Co. as vice president and manager of sales. In 1919 he had a disagreement with Mr. Carr, and decided to retire as he had a comfortable income. That same year he was talked into buying oil stocks against his better judgement. The deal turned out to be crooked and he lost much of his money. The crash of 1929 took the rest of his income, and in 1930 he studied the insurance business and became a top salesman for Sun Life of Canada for the next three years. He stayed with that company and other insurance companies until his death in 1944.

He was a member of the Calumet Club in Winchester where he won numerous trophies for bowling. He was also a member of the Winchester Country Club where he won the president's cup. He had a handicap of 3 in the Mass. Golf Assoc. and was a fine athlete in every sport. He was 5' 11½" tall and weighed 240 lbs. as long as I knew him, but he was not fat, his weight being largely muscle. He had brown eyes and dark brown curly hair, which turned gray very early. He was a generous and humorous father and the idol of his small daughter.

Charles G.M. Bond went to school in Petersham, Mass. and then went to Detroit, Mich. where he worked for Pingree & Smith, boot and shoe factory as head book-keeper. He was very successful and became a member of the firm, but in 1887 his eye-sight began to fail and his wife urged him to return to Mass. He moved to Groton, where he bought a small farm and raised chickens, but didn't like farming and after two years he moved to Whitman, Mass. where he opened a paper box factory, and remained for six months. Mr. Pingree became Governor of the state of Mich. and sent for Charles Bond to go to Jackson, Mich. to help a friend who had a fertilizer business on its last legs. It was too late to save the business, which failed in seven months. Charles Bond then moved his family to Bristol, N.H. where he went into partnership with his wife's Uncle Cyrus Taylor. The two men couldn't agree and after a year he left. His wife gave him a $25,000. inheritance of hers, to open a paper box factory in Stoughton, Mass. After two years he left there and moved to Hudson, Mass. where he started a paper box business, and built a house for his family. He soon left that factory in charge of his son-in-law, Harry Moore, and opened another factory in Roxbury, Mass. After a disagreement with his son Herbert, he sold out to him, and opened another paper box factory in East Cambridge Mass. He took his sons Alfred and Harold into the business, which they eventually turned into the Consolidated Paper Box Co, of Somerville, Mass. He retired in 1920 and spent winters at the Mission Inn at Riverside, Calif. with his third wife, Mary, and he died there 1922. He was over six feet tall, thin, brown eyes and dark brown hair. 6' 2".

Chapter 1. Bond

John Bond emigrated to America 1639 and settled in Newbury, Mass. where he was proprietor 1642. When Rowley was set off from Newbury, his property was found to be in Rowley. In 1660 he moved to Haverhill, Mass. and took all of his family except his son John who went to Beverly, Mass. In 1661 he purchased Nelson Island for 20 lbs.

The Bonds were an ancient Anglo-Saxon family dating at least from the time of Edward The Confessor. The Domesday book of William The Conqueror lists them as having vast estates and holdings in Dorset, Essex, Cornwall and eight other shires. Our branch of the family goes back to Earth in Hoplewood, co. Cornwall. The pedigree goes back to 1250.

The surname Bond is derived from the Anglo-Saxon word "bonda" meaning householder, proprietor, husbandman, the man highest in position after the Earl and responsible only to the Earl.

Three brothers, William, Thomas and John emigrated to America, William to Watertown, Mass., Thomas to Virginia, and John to Newbury, Mass. They were grandsons of Jonas and Rose Bond of Bury St. Edmunds, whose children were:- 1. Oliver, 2. John "the elder" 3. John "the younger" bap. 12/26/1591, Bartholomew, 5. William bap. 12/28/1595, 6. Thomas bap. 9/8/1597, 7. Elizabeth b. 3/12/1599, who married Ephraim Child, 8. Margaret bap. 12/10/1600.

Thomas "the younger son" Bond married Elizabeth Wood and he d. 3/10/1659. Their children were:-

(see Genealogy of Robert Taylor)

Jonathan M. Taylor was a merchant in New Baltimore, Mich 1852-55, and in Detroit, Mich. 1855-84, he then moved to Boston, Mass. and was New England sales agent for E.C. Hazzard & Co. and Franco-American Food Co. He had his office at 54 Broad St. Boston, and lived with his family in Brookline, Mass. He organized many food fairs at Mechanics Hall on Huntington Ave. Boston, and in 1889 he caught a cold at one of these fairs, which developed into pneumonia. He was never really well again, although he kept working until his death two years later. 5' 5" blue eyes, dark brown hair.

Harriet A. Taylor's mother died when she was only three years old and she was raised by her father's fourth wife, whom she loved. She spent much time on the farm of her Aunt Anna Taylor in Effingham, N.H. until 1855 when she moved to Detroit with the family. There she visited a friend named Miss Wooley, who had a date with Charles Bond. Miss Wooley wanted to get a date for her friend and asked what type man she preferred. Harriet said she liked tall blond men. When the two men arrived for their date, Harriet preferred Charles Bond, the date of her friend. He was tall but dark. After their marriage, she moved many times but always loved New Hampton, N.H. best of any place and finally bought a summer home there where she died in the fall of 1909. She is buried in the New Hampton Cemetery, in the town she loved so much.

She was exactly 5' tall with hazel eyes and dark brown curls.

Nicholas Mason Taylor was a blacksmith and a justice of the peace. He lived in Sanbornton and New Hampton, N.H. for fifty two years and was a most valuable citizen, holding office under the state government. He did more legal business for the public than any other man in town. He was competent and honest. His council was sought with confidence and his decisions gave evidence of intelligent and sound judgement.

Jonathan Taylor fought in the American Revolution and appears on the pay roll of Lt. Col. David Webster's co. of militia, which marched from Plymouth, N.H. and towns adjacent to reinforce the garrison at Ticonderoga on the alarm of July 1777; time of service 12 days. Again on the pay roll of Capt. Chase Taylor's co. Col. Thomas Stickney's regt. Gen. Stark's brigade, which company marched from Sanbornton and joined the Northern Continental Army 1777; service 5 days. D.A.R. #376281 Brenda B. Bailey

The History of Sanbornton stated that Jonathan couldn't give more time to the service because of the duties of caring for his aged father as well as his family. His brother Chase Taylor was quite a hero.

I have been particularly interested in this Taylor genealogy because ever since I can remember, there has been a family legend that we are descended through this line from King Robert The Bruce of Scotland. When I began to investigate, I found that the Taylor family of Betsey Ann Melissa Taylor, the fourth wife of Jonathan Taylor, is descended from Robert The Bruce, through the immigrant Robert Taylor. Our Taylor family goes back to William Taylor and to date I have not been able to Thomas McMullen's ancestors went from Scotland to Ireland at the time of Oliver Cromwell and the name of the family in Scotland was McMillan. Thomas was an expert linen weaver and left Ireland 1728 when England made severe trade laws excluding Irish linen, which caused widespread poverty in Ireland. The McMullens were Presbyterian and soon moved away from the Puritans on the coast of Mass. to the middle of the state. Patrick was a deacon in the church in Pelham, Mass.

Mary Colister also came from Ireland and when both her parents died, she was raised in the family of James Caldwell of Holden and Northboro, Mass.

According to the Gray Genealogy, Isaac, George and John Gray were brothers. George was a harriner. John left many descendants. The name Gray was originally "de Croy" and is the name of a place in Burgundy, in the Haut-Saone region. A descendant of Rollo was chamberlain to Robert, Duke of Normandy and from him received honors and a castle at Croy. The name was changed to de Gray and there was a J. de Gray at the battle of Hastings with William The Conqueror, who granted a coat of arms to Reganus de Gray. The family held property in Scotland in 1230 and Andrew Gray was with Robert The Bruce. The family became illustrious in the time of Edward IV.

The father of Isaac had been in the British Navy lost an arm and received a pension.

These first cousins of my grandmother were Hattie and Laura Danforth and a Mrs. Whiting. I then went through the records at the State House in Boston and found that the mother of Caroline Matilda Foster Barnard was Caroline Gragg who married James Foster. The mother of Laura and Hattie Danforth was Cordelia R. Gragg who married Samuel A. Danforth. The parents of both Caroline and Cordelia Gragg were Oliver Gragg and Alice Ditson Gragg. Therefore the mother of Harriet Azanda Gragg must also have been Oliver and Alice Ditson Gragg. Hence this genealogy.

7. Samuel Gragg b. Ireland, emigrated with brothers 1712

According to the History of Wyndham N.H., the story of the Gragg-Gregg family as told by David Gregg, a descendant, is as follows: A former David Gregg was born in Argyllshire, Scotland and was a captain in Oliver Cromwell's Army in 1655. He was one of the 20,000. Protestants that went from England and Scotland to northern Ireland. He had large land holdings there and one of his servants was a young Catholic boy. In 1689 in the time of James I, a French army landed in Ireland and this boy guided 40 soldiers to the home of his master. They robbed the home of 300 pounds sterling in gold, murdered Capt. David Gregg and his wife. His son James ran to the stables to get a horse and escape but was cut down by the soldiers. Fortunately the wife and sons of James were away on a visit and so were spared. When these four sons grew up, they emigrated to America in 1712 and landed in Boston, Mass. John went to South Carolina, Andrew went to Philadelphia, David went to Wyndham, N.H. and Samuel soon settled in Groton, Mass. and changed the spelling of his name to Gragg.

The Graggs are said to be of the clan McGregor.

Lt. Ebenezer Eastman fought in the battle of Bunker Hill. When his captain was wounded, he took command of the company. He was very active in the Revolution and the first to volunteer from the town of Gilkanton, N.H. D.A.R.#376281 Brenda B. Bailey

His wife Mary, received no news of him from the battle and was worried. She bundled up her baby and rode horseback all the way to Boston to find her husband. As he was wounded, she stayed to care for him until he was well enough to ride home with her. A descendant, Benjamin Franklin Taylor, has written a poem of this event called "Mary Butler's Ride."

- Richard Sears was a member of the Scrooby colony at Leyden, Holland and the last of that group to come to this country. He emigrated to Plymouth, Mass. 5/8/1630 probably after the death of his father in Holland. He was evidently a man of wealth and possessed a large property in Yarmouth, Mass. His father, John Bouchier Sayers lived in Holland and married a Van Egmond, one of Holland's finest families. His grand-father, John Sayers was a man of wealth and dignity in Colchester, England. Adam Sayer, who died 1346 had a manor in Kent Co. and John Sayer was a baron in Parliament in the time of Henry VI.

Lt. William Butler bought property from his father-in-law Robert Cross, 1695 and 1699 in Ipswich, Mass. He was a direct descendant of Stephen Butler a non-conformist clergyman in England. The Butler family is famous in Ireland where Theobald Walter became the earl of Ormonde. His brother Hubert Walter was Archbishop of Canterbury.

There is some controversy about who married Samuel Eastman and David Hoyt in Old Families of Salisbury and Amesbury, says that Samuel married an Elizabeth Scriven of Dover. However, the History of Northfield, Mass. lists the children of John Severence and says that Elizabeth married Samuel Eastman.

John Severence went to Salisbury, Mass. and received land there in the first division 1639, more in 1640 and 1654. He was a "planter", vintner and victualer and was taxed there 1650 and 1652. He was a commoner and signed the petition of 1658. Licensed to keep an "ordinary" 1662-3. Freeman 1667. His wife Abigail died when her twins were born and he married ■ 2nd Susanna, the widow Ambrose in 1663.

This link took a great deal of time and effort to figure out and there is no published proof of it that I know of. Please note that the second son of Roland Sears and Mary Fletcher was named "Jonathan Fletcher." In the Fletcher Genea. it says that Jonathan, son of Paul removed to Rutland, Mass where he published intentions to marry Lucy Stevens in 1748. Instead he married Mary Bullard and had five children. She died and he married Abigail Noyes. Then in the Sears Genea. I found that Mary Sears married a Jonathan Fletcher. She was the daughter of Barnabas Sears who died 1740. His brother Roland settled his estate and seems to have adopted the little daughter Mary, who was baptised 1743.

During the Indian wars, Matthew and his family went to Ft. Hoosick, near his house, for protection. By his house was a spring house where they kept the butter, did the family washing etc. When danger from the Indians seemed to be over, Matthew put his wife on a horse, and with his little son they went to the spring house to get the washing. Indians suddenly attacked them. The wife spurred her horse and escaped wounded. The little boy hid behind the door of the spring house, but the father was discovered. Matthew's body was riddled with bullets, then the Indians stretched it on a log and chopped it to pieces with their tomahawks. The little boy finally managed to escape to tell of the tragedy.

Richard Kimball (Kerball) and his brother Henry came from Ipswich, England on the ship "Elizabeth" in 1634 and settled at Watertown, Mass. In England they lived near Bury St. Edmunds and were noted for their integrity and placed in positions of trust. Richard settled on the border of Cambridge and was freeman 1635. He was invited to move to Ipswich, Mass. where they needed a good wheelwright and was granted a house lot and 40 acres and the liberty to pasture 2 cows on the common. In 1649 given permission to "fell such white oaks as he hath occasion to use about his trade and for town use." When Ursula Scott died, he married the widow Margaret Dow. He was the son of Richard Kimball of Lawford, England, and his wife Elizabeth. His father was a wheelwright and taught his son the trade.

The line of Henry Scott, father of Ursula, goes back to the Magna Charta barons.

Thomas Clarke was called "The Pilgrim" to distinguish him from other Clarkes. He was a seafaring man and a carpenter. In 1637 he was the first to volunteer to go against the Pequot Indians. 1642 surveyor, 1651 on Plymouth Committee. He evidently loved to trade as he was fined for buying a pair of boots for ten shillings and then selling them for fifteen. He traded implements to the Indians for land and was fined for that. He evidently was not discouraged as he ended life with quite a sizable estate. His wife Susanna Ring came to this country with her widowed mother, Mary.

Some Immigrant Ancestors

p. 11 John Roberts immigrated from Wales with his mother who died in Roxbury, Mass. 7/1/1645 aged 101. He was freeman 5/22/1639 and the brother of Samuel Roberts of Ipswich, Mass.

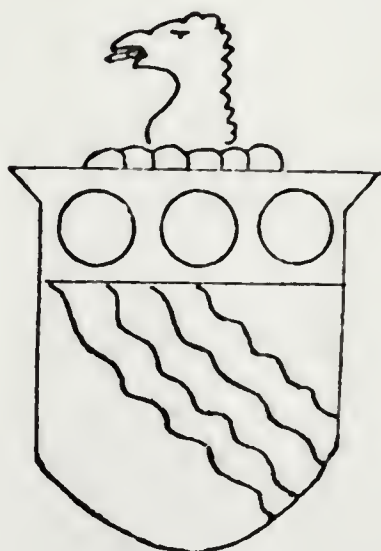

p. 16 John Wheeler was from Salisbury, Wiltshire, England and emigrated 3/24/1633 with his wife Anne. He died 1670 Newbury, Mass.

p. 41 Stephen Jordan emigrated 1634 and came to Ipswich, Mass. in the "Mary and John". Moved to Newbury, Mass. where he died 2/8/1670. There is a coat of arms for this family.

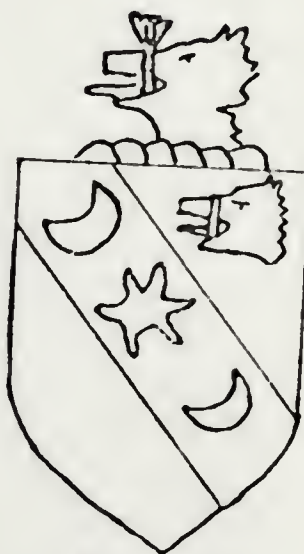

p. 42 Henry Scott was of Rattlesden, England and the son of Sir William Scott. His wife was named Martha Whatlock and she emigrated to America with her children Ursula and Thomas. This line I have traced back to Alfred The Great, Cahrlemagne, Malcolm Canmore, the Magna Charta barons etc.

p. 51 Andrew Stevenson was of Cambridge, Mass. and emigrated with his wife Jane and daughter Deborah. Other children born in Cambridge, Mass.

p. 54 Henry Phillips came first to Watertown, Mass. then moved to Dedham, Mass. He was married to Anne Dwight.
